BUILDING ON OUR SUCCESS

Anglicord is a small but energetic organisation that, thanks to its dedicated staff, board, volunteers and partners, punches well above its weight on the national and international stage. I would like to thank those people who make this incredible effort possible.

We are blessed with a knowledgeable and professional Board of Directors, and I would like to welcome three new members to the Board this year: Lisa Brookman, Head of People & Culture with Big Sky Credit Union, formerly Manager of RACV's HR Strategy and Capability; Nic Mackay, Co-Founder of The Oaktree Foundation and Founder of Key Change Music, currently the National Program Director of High Resolves; and Tony Hickson, a scientist and accountant, with management experience in large multinational corporations and medium sized independent schools & colleges.

Tracey Mathews has left our Board, and I thank her for her thorough financial expertise. My thanks go to all our current Board members who have dedicated many unpaid hours to analysing, guiding and promoting Anglicord's work.

I also thank the volunteers who have assisted in many ways through the past year, assisting with administration, fundraising and other tasks: Robert Street, Ann Andrews, Helen Boyle, Vasanthi Sarandra, Jenny McPherson, Emma Woodward, Ellen Campbell, Juanita, Mary Anne Xavier, and Mary.

I congratulate our many supporters in the community. We don't have a large publicity budget so we rely heavily on word of mouth and reputation. Parishes and individuals have held fundraising events, assisted us in local projects, sold calendars on our behalf, and have spread the word admirably!

Anglicord's growing profile is partly due to our inclusion in many important bodies here in Australia, and internationally. Of particular note, Anglicord largely coordinated the Pacific Consultation for the Anglican Alliance in Honiara in August. The Anglican Alliance, which has recently begun its regional consultations and launched a website, is an international initiative that brings together the work being done by aid agencies across the Communion. It provides a clear voice for the Communion in international development, and I was fortunate to be appointed to this network last year by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr Rowan Williams.

I would like to congratulate CEO Misha Coleman and all Anglicord staff on an exciting year of growth both at home and overseas. Despite the global financial downturn, Anglicord's finances remain sound.

The Board is delighted that Anglicord has taken on the life-changing Australia Africa Community Engagement Scheme (AACES) program, a large and ambitious project co-funded by AusAID to improve maternal and child health in Ethiopia and Kenya. It is also very satisfying to see the positive evaluation of the Solar Lights Pilot Program in Solomon Islands, and I look forward to the program's expansion in the Pacific and beyond.

Building on the success of last year's Acts of Unity publication, we received a great response to our 2011 edition which focused on providing a future for children in the developing world. The success of our new website is evidenced by the dramatic growth in online donations this year, and we have been able to launch a sub-site for Women Die Waiting, our campaign to improve access to breast cancer treatment for women in Gaza.

Please continue to support us in your prayers, and financially, so that we can continue this important work.

The Venerable Alison Taylor
Chair, Anglicord

A YEAR OF GROWTH AND CHALLENGE

This past year could be summed up in one word: "Growth!"

We have more partners, and our projects are growing. Anglicord, along with partners Nossal Institute and Australian Volunteers International (AVI), is undertaking a five year program partly funded by AusAID to improve maternal and child health in Ethiopia and Kenya. This scheme will really make a difference in the lives of people living in some of the harshest places on the planet. We have also expanded our portfolio of HIV and AIDS projects (see right). Our Solomon Islands Solar Lights Pilot Program was highly successful, and we are thrilled to be expanding this program throughout the Pacific.

This growth requires more professional staff to ensure financial probity and delivery of high quality project outcomes, and we've been able to appoint two staff to live "in country", close to our partners and programs. I also welcome staff to new part time positions: Jo Maher, International Program Manager; Ben Lakos, Program Support Officer; and Suzanne Trimble, Finance & Administration Manager. They are a great addition to our dedicated team who work diligently to implement our projects in the field, and to raise both awareness and funds. We've recently undertaken an office re-fit meet occupational health and safety requirements, so please drop by our East Melbourne office to say hello and learn more about our work.

It's been a rewarding year for me in the field and here at home. I worked for a period in Solomon Islands while we began our pilot solar lights program. Over 60% of women there report violence by an intimate partner, and over half have been forced into sex against their will. It really highlights for me the importance of our projects there - work to reduce HIV and AIDS requires education in industries such as logging about the implications of sex trafficking, early marriage and women's rights. Increased lighting through our solar program means that women are safer, because, to put it bluntly, more light means less rape.

Earlier this year, I supported a delegation of Australian Federal parliamentarians in a field visit to Palestine to see first-hand the impact of the blockade on Gaza, as well as visiting Anglicord's partners there. While not all the MPs were able to get into Gaza, I am delighted that through this study trip Anglicord was able to cement a strong relationship with Maria Vamvakinou, Federal Member for Calwell, and a staunch promoter of our Women Die Waiting campaign. Maria launched our campaign in Parliament House, Canberra, and in Melbourne, and helped develop the cross-party motion that passed the Australian Senate in support of the initiative.

We continue to respond to emergencies, and the situation in East Africa has weighed heavily on our partners and our donors. Anglicord is fortunate to be amongst the AusAID accredited non-government organisations who this year will be able to take advantage of the Federal Government's Dollar-For-Dollar matching scheme for East Africa Relief and Recovery, so all donations we receive for this appeal between 5 October to 30 November will be matched by the government.

As we consolidate all of the changes, growth, and challenges, I'd like to thank our supporters. You have shared with us our vision for a peaceful, just and sustainable world for all, and without you, none of our work would be possible.

May God bless us all, as we strive to bring about his vision for our world.

Misha Coleman
CEO, Anglicord

CHANGING AND SAVING LIVES THROUGH PARTNERSHIP

Working with Anglicord's programs can be a balancing act - weighing long term relationships with partners in targeted countries to bring about sustainable change, against the flexibility needed to respond to emerging opportunities and disasters. At Anglicord, we feel we've got the formula right, and we are committed to meeting the expectations of the Anglican community and partner organisations in Australia, Africa, Asia and the Pacific, in the most effective way.

“New programs have commenced, around HIV prevention in Mozambique, Solar Lights in Solomon Islands and Tanzania, Maternal and Child Health in Ethiopia and Kenya, breast cancer treatment in Palestine.”

Yallo girls in Ethiopia

In Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, South Africa and Solomon Islands, our long term relationships mean that more people are testing for HIV and learning about prevention; receiving antiretroviral medication so they can live longer and participate fully in life; and enjoying community based support, including organic farming groups, which reduce stigma and improve food security. Importantly, the vexed topics of harmful traditional practices and beliefs including violence against women are being challenged.

We continue working in Thailand with people in and around the refugee camps on the Thai-Burma Border, assisting the Karen refugees to maintain their cultural identity while developing education and income generating programs to sustain themselves.

There are new programs around HIV prevention in Mozambique, Solar Lights in Solomon Islands and Tanzania, Maternal & Child Health in Ethiopia and Kenya, and breast cancer treatment in Palestine. This means an increase in staff, and for the first time Anglicord has staff members permanently located in the field - Phillip Walker (Africa Program Manager) in Kenya, and Kate Higgins (Pacific Program Manager) in Solomon Islands.

Emergencies have also featured during the year with funds raised to provide relief either directly to partners or through the ACT Alliance for the drought in East Africa, floods in Pakistan, emergency relief in Sudan, the earthquake in Haiti, and continuing relief work in Samoa following the tsunami.

Anglicord also supports Anglican parishes and others to raise funds for specific projects. In the past year we assisted agencies working in Ethiopia (the Mille Maternity hospital and training); Kenya (memory books); India (women's empowerment); and Burundi (financial training and capacity building).

BRINGING THE MESSAGE HOME

Anglicord's overseas work is funded and energised by the support we receive here in Australia, and we are always looking for new opportunities to share with our supporters and others news of how their donations are helping.

As well as using traditional methods such as mail outs, events and publications, our use of digital media is also expanding into multimedia and social networking. Here are some examples of how we've taken our vision to our supporters and beyond:

WOMEN DIE WAITING CAMPAIGN

Anglicord engaged market researchers Capacity Builders to work with Anglicord around branding and developing the Women Die Waiting campaign to improve early detection and treatment of breast cancer in Gaza. The campaign was pitched to the National Breast Cancer Foundation, who subsequently offered their endorsement. Our CEO Misha Coleman also facilitated a study tour of Australian Parliamentarians to Palestine in April.

EMERGENCY APPEALS

Anglicord has raised emergency appeals in partnership with the ACT Alliance, including those for emergency preparedness in Sudan, the Pakistan Floods, the Haiti earthquake, and the Pacific tsunami.

EDUCATION ABOUT AID

Valerie Browning, founder of Anglicord's partner in Ethiopia the Afar Pastoralist Development Association, visited donors in Paynesville, and addressed the Nossal Institute.

STOP PRESS

Anglicord continued its good relationship with Anglican media around Australia, particularly around coverage of the Autumn Appeal, which focused on women's empowerment. The Melbourne Anglican also published a special advertising supplement on Anglicord's HIV and AIDS work in the April edition.

PARISHES LIGHT UP FOR ANGLICORD

St Hilary's Kew and St Agnes' Glenhuntly tested and charged around 1000 lights before the lights' shipment to Solomon Islands, and St Augustine's Mentone sponsored a Bright Lights for Smart Villages project in Pagopago, Solomon Islands.

The Christmas Lights appeal mail out included solar lights themed wrapping paper, and the Solar Evaluation Pilot Report was published for parish and corporate information.

ANGLICORD ONLINE

A new section called "Think" was introduced on the Anglicord website, encouraging engagement with issues around aid, and the electronic newsletters were launched.

Middle East and East Asia Program Manager Beth Hookey was the keynote speaker at Anglican Women of Australia (AWA) rallies throughout Gippsland in April.

When human communities are dealing justly with the needs of those who don't have social power, then strife, division, and war are usually far away.

Dr Katharine Jefferts Schori, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church of the United States of America.

ANGLICAN CALENDAR

Our second year of publishing this popular product involved a redesign of the order form, more consistent branding, and a business review.

ADVOCACY

We continue to advocate for peace, justice and an end to poverty in the wider community by, for example, promoting Simply Sharing Week, supporting the World Week of Prayer for Peace in Palestine and Israel, and involvement in groups such as the National Ecumenical Working Group on Palestine and Israel, and the General Synod Environment Working Group.

Please visit our website at www.anglicord.org.au to learn more about the activities we are undertaking both at home and with our partners overseas.
